Here is a question that is often asked to children all around the world: “What do you want to be when you grow up?” The answers for each country are very different.

Look at these graphs. In America, the most popular choice was to be a YouTuber. 29% of children wanted to be one in the future. To be an astronaut was at the end of the list, with only 11%. However, this is very different for China. Becoming an astronaut is the most popular at 56%, and a YouTuber at 11%. It is clear that the children’s environment has a large influence on their interests. In China, science is important in schools, and many children think that humans will live in space some day in the future. But many American children are not so interested in space because they think that Americans have already been on the moon.

What about in Japan? In one elementary school in Osaka, the ranking from first to last, was soccer player, doctor, YouTuber and office worker. The reason is there are many strong Japanese sports players around the world now.

We don’t know what the world will be like in the future. New technologies may create new kinds of jobs. For example, to be a YouTuber was a choice that children didn’t have in the past. So, it is important for us to study hard and learn many different skills when we are young.
