授業目的/Course Objectives	Canadians think about their country as one of the world's best. Canadian cities rank among the safest and most livable in the world, and most (but not all) Canadians enjoy high standards of living. Yet Canada, like Japan and other western countries, faces new challenges. Rising income inequality and child poverty force Canadians to think about what needs to be done to maintain a fair, cohesive society. Threats of global terrorism create intense debate about the balance between national security and personal freedom. The desire for economic prosperity leads the Canadian government to promote the production of "dirty oil" even though carbon emissions are a main source of climate change. New concerns about the right of women to say "no" have led Canadian universities and governments to think about tough new rules against sexual harassment. This course introduces students to the basics of Canadian government, including the Constitution, Parliament, the federal system, and the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. It gives an overview of the historical events and ideas that have shaped Canada and its politics. It asks students to explore hot political debates in Canada, thinking about similarities and differences to Japan.
到達目標/Objectives to be Attained	Students will develop a basic understanding of Canadian government and current debates in Canadian politics. By the end of the course they will be able to compare Canadian and Japanese views on common political issues.
